JEFF KLINGER

Jeff Klinger, who was just selected for the NACA national convention, recently taped a Comedy Central pilot with Daniel Tosh.

It was at the University of Utah where Jeff at reluctantly entered a comedy competition. While on stage, Jeff immediately knew he needed pursue comedy as a career. He won the competition and left school to move to Chicago, and never looked back.

Since that competition Jeff has toured the nation as a headliner, appearing at the Comedy Central Laugh Riots three years in a row as well as the Chicago Comedy Festival twice.

Not only is Jeff an industry favorite but a comedian favorite as well, garnering praise from the likes of such greats as the late George Carlin: "One of the most entertaining and interesting comedians today . . . an interesting choice of topics with a new and different slant that always keeps you guessing. . . my new friend."

Jeff is also a talented writer, having written for The Late Show with David Letterman, and creating award-winning short films in between television appearances.

Jeff Klinger grew up in Brooklyn, NY, and his pull-no-punches observations never let you forget it for one minute of his hilarious performance.
